
Sask website provides wedding help

By Derek Ruttie
The Outlook

A website is giving prospective newlyweds in Saskatchewan a resource for planning their big day. Saskweddings.com, launched in 2006 is being promoted as the first online wedding resource that is exclusive to the province.

The site provides couples with helpful links to government forms and procedures, as well as a Wedding Planner Kit. Vendors that are listed on the site also have downloadable coupons that could save couples money on their wedding plans.

A press release stated that the creators of the site wanted to give the public something that catches their eyes.

"Saskweddings.com is a 100% visual experience. We feel that the more visuals there are, the less you need to read. People can literally get what they need in minutes. Our special way to help alleviate some of the undo pressure and stress from planning your wedding, not add to it."

Statistics on Canadian marriages show that the wedding industry in the province is booming.

Average Number of Marriages in Saskatchewan Per Year: 5000
Average Cost of a Canadian Marriage: $25,000

Average Age of Marriage: 29
Engaged Couples who live together: 71%
Saskatchewan Wedding Industry: Approximate revenue is $125 million per year.

The site creators have designed a resource for couples that can be helpful in planning marriage practices of all types.

"We want to make Saskweddings.com accessible & necessary to the consuming public.

It's important that all people and cultures feel welcomed at Saskweddings.com. We have information that discusses all of the common marriage practices with different cultures, such as Christian, First Nations, Muslim, Jewish, and much more!"

With many local spring and summer weddings on the horizon, Saskweddings.com might be an essential tool for planning the big event.

